Alec Losee

My name is Alec Losee. I grew up in Northern Utah where my life was consumed by baseball and being outdoors, fly fishing and hunting. I graduated high school in 2014 and moved to North Georgia to attend school there, after a year and a half I moved back to Utah to go to school and be closer to my family.

After moving back to Utah, I switched degrees to Aviation Science, and this is the same time I began splitting time between Utah and Jackson, WY, where I was working at a fly shop and guiding fly-fishing trips in the surrounding areas. It was at this time that I met a beautiful fly-fishing bum from Idaho Falls named Madison Hyde, who sold me my first drift boat.

Three years later I finally made her my wife. Between those two historic events though I met Tyler Smith through the world of social media, he trapped me and indoctrinated me into our cult of Kurzhaar Kulture. He pointed me in the direction of vom Mountain View in Wyoming where I picked up my first DK Astro vom Mountain View, call name “Cody.”

Since then, it has been a wild ride that would have been unachievable without Madison. We have our home base in Southeastern Idaho, the epicenter of all our fantastic adventures. While dating and being married to her I’ve become a private pilot, instrument rated pilot, and am now finishing off my commercial pilot license.

Together we’ve pushed each other to learn everything we can about Deutsch Kurzhaars and training for these tests. We started vom Tetontal Deutsch Kurzhaar which is aimed to spread the love we have come to found for these dogs, perfectly suited for the Western US.

I am proud to have been selected as the Desert Mountain Regional Director. I look forward to serving the membership and working with the Board to make the DKGNA the premier DK organization in North America.
